

Cass is a high school teacher and self-taught photographer from Charlottesville, Virginia.

He loves being outside, whether it's running, hiking, or practicing photography. He takes photos of the natural beauty in this world, and upon request he will photograph individuals, families, or events.

Chasing the best light is Cass's main passion, as he's a total geek for a radiant sky. Sunrises are his favorite time of day. The mountains and the deserts of the American West are his favorite places to photograph landscapes, and he'll chase wildlife wherever possible!

He travels, occasionally internationally, but often living out of the back of his car. To date Cass has driven across the country and back six times, but he's always hoping to add to that number!
